

The Fourth Annual
Raymond E. Mason Jr.
Leadership
Symposium

Dianne Stober, Ph.D.

Faculty, Organizational Management & Development Program
Fielding Graduate University, and Principal, Stober Associates

Dr. Stober is a practitioner, educator, and scholar in coaching psychology. In her coaching and consulting practice, Dianne focuses on providing coaching services to organizations and individuals in a variety of settings. With her feet planted in both the practice of coaching and the development of coaching as a field of study, Dianne brings a unique blend of knowledge and theory with real-world application. She is a dynamic coach skilled in communication, facilitation, and promoting development and growth for her clients. She uses her strengths-based approach to help people leverage their capabilities to think bigger, act more effectively, and achieve more success.

Dianne blends the need for personal insight with the need for action-oriented development so that clients see clearer decision-making leading to effective action. She has coached, taught, and facilitated with individuals in organizations ranging from large multi-national corporations to small companies, private practices, and local non-profits. She is on the faculty of Fielding Graduate University in the Organizational Management and Development program, teaches in Fielding's Evidence-Based Coaching Certificate program, and has taught coaching courses for the University of Texas-Dallas and Colorado State University. Along with her colleague, Anthony Grant, she co-edited The Evidence-Based Coaching Handbook: Putting Best Practices to Work for Your Clients (Wiley, 2006).

Dianne has presented and published her work in a wide variety of scholarly and professional venues such as the American Psychological Association, APA's Division of Consulting Psychology, the Australian Evidence-Based Coaching Conference, the International Journal of Evidence-Based Coaching and Mentoring, International Journal of Coaching in Organizations, the British Psychological Society's Special Group on Coaching Psychology, the Professional Coach and Mentor Association, and the International Coach Federation. She is on editorial boards for the International Coaching Psychology Review and the International Journal of Evidence-Based Coaching and Mentoring. Dianne is also the current Vice President of the Graduate School Alliance in Executive Coaching in North America.

Dianne's professional and educational background is as a licensed clinical psychologist. She received her Ph.D. in clinical psychology from Georgia State University, completed her internship at the University of Colorado Health Sciences Center, and a post-doctoral fellowship at Emory University. She earned her B.A. in Psychology from Washington University in St. Louis, MO.
